

Multiple Choice Questions: Selecting Multiple Correct Answers

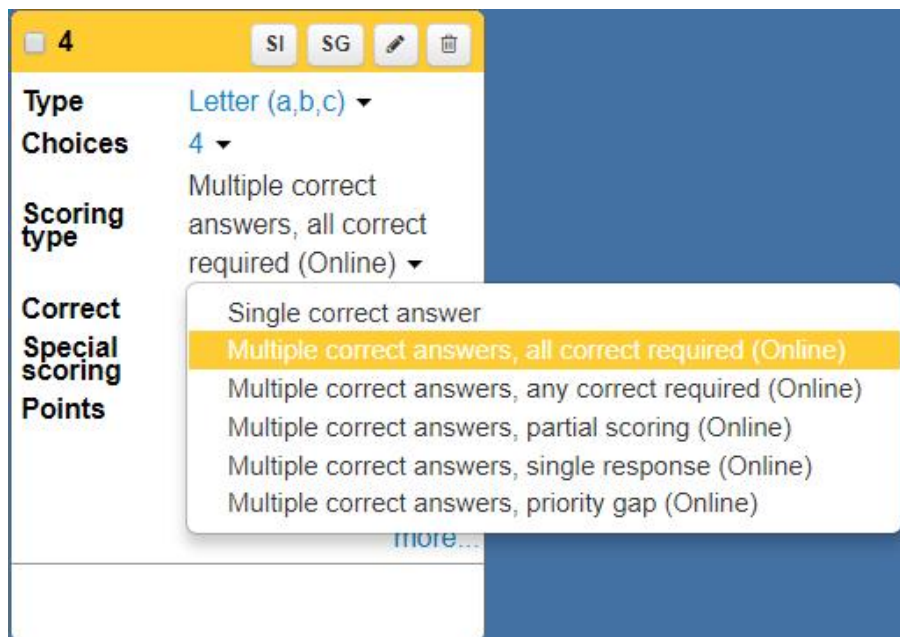

When creating a multiple choice question, a user has the option to select more than one correct answer. eDoctrina provides different types of scoring options for selected-response questions that involve multiple correct answers. These types of questions can be administered online or via answer sheets

When creating an assessment, locate the Scoring Type option in either the Answers Key or Questions view.

When you click on the Scoring Type option, you will be able to select which multiple correct answer combination you need for your question structure.

Below are the following options for Multiple Correct Answer questions:

● Multiple correct answers, all correct required

(all answers must be chosen for student to receive credit)

● Multiple correct answers, any correct required

(if at least one correct answer is selected, full credit will be given)

● Multiple correct answers, partial scoring

(student will receive partial credit for choosing at least one of the correct answers)

● Multiple correct answers, single response

● Multiple correct answers, priority gap

(related to our 3rd party question banks - do not currently have the tools for educators to create their own custom priority gap type questions)

Once a user selects the type of Multiple Correct Answers format, the next step is for the user to choose which combination of answers are correct/required.

For example, below is a question where all correct answers are required to be selected for the student to receive full credit. To specify which answers are correct the user needs to select the edit pencil and select both correct answers (A and C).
