- Focusing on the Main Ideas
  In this lesson you will be able to
  - identify reasons why teens use tobacco.
  - explain how a person can become addicted to nicotine.
  - apply accessing-information skills to find health information on quitting tobacco use.
  - describe how antismoking efforts are helping teens stay tobacco free.

- Reading Strategy
  Summarizing For each main heading in this lesson, make a flash card that captures the main points of the heading.

Quick Write

Do the ads you see on TV and in magazines affect your decisions? Write a few sentences about how advertising can influence a teen’s choices.

Why Do Teens Begin Using Tobacco?

Most teens know that making the decision to avoid tobacco use is the way to stay healthy. They also know it’s against the law for people under the age of 18 to buy tobacco. Still, teens try tobacco for many reasons. The good news is that the number of teen smokers has fallen over the years. A 2004 study found that 89 percent of middle school students don’t smoke.

Reasons for Tobacco Use Among Teens

One of the main reasons teens may try tobacco is peer pressure. Teens may try tobacco even if they don’t want to because they think they might lose their friends. Real friends will not pressure you to try an activity that is harmful to your health. It’s important to choose friends who influence you to make healthful choices, like staying tobacco free.

- Each state has its own legal smoking age. Why do you think these signs are posted in stores that sell tobacco products?
Why Teens Use Tobacco

Every day in America, 2,000 more young people start using tobacco. One-third of people who start using tobacco in their teens will die at a young age. Reasons for using tobacco are listed below. Counter each by thinking of reasons not to use tobacco.

- Thinking it will help with weight loss
- Wanting to seem more grown-up
- Peer pressure
- Wanting to be just like a favorite celebrity
- Parents or other family members use tobacco
- Wanting to look cool
- Media make it attractive
- Addiction

There are other reasons teens may try using tobacco. Figure 8.5 names some of them. Some teens think using tobacco makes them seem cooler, older, or more mature. They also think smoking will help them feel more confident around others who smoke. Some teens may try tobacco simply because they've been told not to use it. They just want to rebel. Other teens are curious and want to try it for themselves. Teens often believe that they will not be harmed by tobacco use or that the health risks do not apply to them.

The media also play a part in teen tobacco use. Magazines, music videos, and movies show images of people using tobacco. Tobacco companies spend billions of dollars advertising their products. Ads are developed that appeal to teens. They show attractive-looking people using tobacco products.

Reading Check Identify Name two reasons teens may consider trying tobacco.
Tobacco Addiction

As you learned in Lesson 1, tobacco contains nicotine. Nicotine is a drug that causes addiction. An addiction is a mental or physical need for a drug or other substance. Nicotine is as addictive as cocaine and heroin. Anyone who stops using nicotine goes through withdrawal. Withdrawal is the unpleasant symptoms that someone experiences when he or she stops using an addictive substance. During withdrawal from smoking, a person may sleep badly and crave nicotine. He or she may feel moody or nervous, or be extra hungry.

Psychological Dependence

First a tobacco user becomes psychologically dependent on tobacco. Psychological dependence is a person's belief that he or she needs a drug to feel good or function normally. Most people know that tobacco is dangerous. Their need for it outweighs the fear of danger as they connect tobacco use with feeling relaxed. For example, a person might smoke during work breaks. Breaking this connection means changing habits. For example, a person could chew sugarless gum instead of reaching for a cigarette.

Physical Dependence

A person who uses tobacco quickly develops a physical dependence to nicotine. Physical dependence is an addiction in which the body develops a chemical need for a drug. Teens can develop a physical dependence for nicotine much more easily than adults can. Their bodies and brains are not fully developed.

Getting involved can help break a psychological dependence on tobacco. Name two activities you could suggest to someone who wants to quit.

500,000,000 people alive today will die from tobacco.

Accessing Information

Quitting Tobacco Use
A person's physical dependence on nicotine makes it very hard to quit using tobacco. Some people cannot quit on their own. Sometimes they need help to overcome the physical addiction to nicotine. Two common methods for quitting are nicotine replacement and certain medications.

- Nicotine replacement may involve nicotine gum, patches, and lozenges. You don't need a prescription for these treatments. You do need a prescription for nicotine inhalers and nasal sprays.
- People who want to quit smoking may join support groups. They can find suggestions about how to stop from organizations such as the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association.

On Your Own
Use home, school, and community resources to find valid information about a method of quitting tobacco use. Use what you learn to create an informative brochure. Your brochure should cover how the method works. It should also include how the method helps people deal with their cravings for nicotine. Present your brochure to your class.

The body's tolerance for nicotine also increases over time. Tolerance is the body's need for larger and larger amounts of a drug to produce the same effect. The body's need for nicotine causes a person to crave the tobacco product. Tobacco users must smoke or chew tobacco more often. They may constantly need to do something with their hands. They may have to keep something in their mouths all the time.

Reading Check Describe Name some symptoms of nicotine withdrawal.

Tobacco Advertising
Tobacco companies spend millions of dollars a year to advertise their products. Colorful ads featuring happy, attractive people can make teens feel that it's fun or cool to use tobacco. Tobacco advertisements can strongly affect teens.
Targeting Teens

Tobacco companies see teens as a target audience. A target audience is a group of people for which a product is intended. Tobacco companies work hard to make their products appealing to teens. Companies may package their cigarettes in bright wrappers or use cartoon characters to sell their product.

Open any magazine and you will find a tobacco advertisement that shows young, attractive people having fun. Maybe they are dancing or playing sports. The tobacco companies want you to think that using their products is fun. They also want you to think that using tobacco makes you attractive.

Like many teens, you probably have favorite celebrities. You often see them wearing a particular brand of clothing or drinking a certain kind of soda. Product placement is when a company pays to show its products in media being used by celebrities. Tobacco companies pay to have celebrities use their products too. If your favorite celebrity smoked cigarettes, would you want to smoke too? By now, you know how harmful tobacco products are to your personal health.

Media literacy is the ability to understand the goals of advertising and the media. The goal of tobacco advertisements is to fool you into becoming a lifelong customer. However, if you are media literate, you will be able to ignore the ads. You will be able to analyze whether health information, products, and services are valid.

Reading Check Describe Explain how product placement can influence a teen to use tobacco.

Antismoking Efforts

Today, more than ever, both teens and adults are more informed about the dangers of tobacco. In fact, most teens want to stay healthy by avoiding tobacco use. As a result, most teens and adults are in favor of a tobacco-free society.
Legal Bans on Tobacco Ads

Tobacco advertising has more limits than ever before. In the United States, laws protect young people from tobacco advertising. For example, companies cannot place outdoor advertisements within 1,000 feet of schools and playgrounds. Tobacco companies cannot make or sell hats, T-shirts, and other items. Tobacco advertisements cannot appear on radio and television. This is why product placement in the media is such an important issue. This practice allows tobacco companies to sidestep the law. Finally, it is illegal to sell tobacco to anyone under age 18. In some states, the age is even higher.

Antismoking Ad Campaigns

Today, antismoking ads are helping to create awareness about the dangers of tobacco use. They want to send the message to people of every age that choosing to use tobacco is a risk behavior that has many negative short-term and long-term consequences. Smokers who see these ads recognize the dangers of tobacco and often try to quit or seek treatment as a result. Nonsmokers who see these ads recognize the benefits of remaining tobacco free.

Reading Check Describe List some of the legal bans on tobacco ads.

Lesson 3 Review

After You Read Review this lesson for new terms, major headings, and Reading Checks.
